HONGKONG, JUNE 19th, 1905.

At a time when the affairs of Norway and Sweden are being forced upon the world's attention, any accurate information about either of those countries is very welcome. We are, therefore, glad to publish GLOBETROTTER's interesting letter, although we are extremely sorry to find that our comments on the 12th instant should have so shocked him by their "ignorance." We tried to treat the subject good-humouredly, not wishing to add to the ill-feeling that obviously exists between the two peoples. Since receiving our esteemed Norwegian correspondent's letter, we have read what we wrote, and looked up the "dry bones of history" to see if our recollection of their spirit and purport was at fault. As a result, we feel entitled to gently reprimand GLOBETROTTER for charging us with "some inaccuracies." The use of the uncomplimentary word "ignorance" we can forgive, in view of the circumstance that we had referred to Norway as the weaker partner. We might have known that no Norwegian would stand that. As a matter of historical record, then, we will plead guilty to one inaccuracy. For our impression that Sweden ever co-operated with Norway in its very successful raids on England, we have been unable to discover any sufficient cause. To Norway be all the honour and glory.

The claim of Norwegians to be "more recognised" is a just one. We could wish, for instance, that GLOBETROTTER would recognise his nationals as others see them. Our sympathy is largely with Norway in this matter, because we are not ignorant of the fact that Norway, although prosecuting agriculture vigorously, is, like England, unable to furnish sufficient produce for home consumption; and it is therefore hard on her that Sweden should seek to force upon her a protectionist policy. But this, as GLOBETROTTER knows, is not really the bone of contention. We deprecate any quarrelling between the Scandinavian peoples, and believe that if the principles of the "National Scandinavian Society," founded in 1864, were perfectly understood, the Union would be allowed to continue. Its purview included three kingdoms, but the Society would doubtless be satisfied to see Sweden and Norway showing a united front in all foreign relations, while reserving independent internal administration. Is it out of the question to define the fiscal policy as much an internal as a foreign policy?

We fear that GLOBETROTTER, and his brethren in Norway, are indeed "somewhat Chauvinistic." Our statement that Norway in 1898 was "refused a purely Norwegian flag," was not erroneous and our correspondent immediately after contradicting it, admits that "it is true." We and he merely express the same fact a little differently. These Norwegian claims are purely Chauvinistic. If it be desirable that Norway and Sweden should unite as Scandinavians when dealing with foreigners, it seems to us that it is reasonable to have a flag to mark the union. Great Britain is not ashamed of the flag which clearly shows the union of Scotland, and Ireland, and those countries (unlike Norway) would object to the removal of their national emblems from the union flag. If Wales has a grievance, it is perhaps that she does not figure as prominently thereon. The fact seems to be that the Norwegian patriots need to recognise the difference between patriotism proper and improper, between sane revolution and mere Chauvinistic rebellion. M. TAINIE in his "Origins of Contemporary France" institutes an illuminating comparison between the Jacobins and real reformers. The latter may be constructors; they have positive ideals for which to strive. The latter quarrel with accepted facts, more iconoclasts. "He knows only that everything frets him," desires to vent his muddled and blustering ill-humour on all around him, frequently turns against imaginary evils, follows puerile aims, or even fights against those laws which are wise and beneficent. Why? Because, TAINIE shrewdly suggests, "however perfect institutions, laws, and manners may be, since they have preceded him, he has not assented to them at all; others, his predecessors, have chosen for him, and have enclosed him, in advance, in a political mould which pleased them."

The Union of 1814 was a "wise and beneficent" measure. Its wisdom and beneficence will be again recognised if ever Russia resumes her old policy. "Norway for the Norwegians" may be a positive ideal; it is admittedly a Chauvinistic one; and Scandinavia for the Scandinavians would be preferable. We did not intend thus to take a side, but preferred to confine ourselves to pacifying words. In a way, GLOBETROTTER has robbed us of our intended reticence.

But in admiration for Norway and Norwegians, we are all that he could desire. We could catalogue more great men than he names; and, by the way, we would not put IBSSEN first. He is admittedly a poet of great power, but he is the archetype of that emotional Norwegian whom we regard as an unworthy descendant of our common Viking ancestry. The prevailing wind of his temper is, like the adage of the Irishman, "agin the Gov'mint." In art and technique he is great; in philosophy we think him ignoble. That by the way. We will not dispute GLOBETROTTER's right as a Norwegian to suggest that his countrymen are more democratic than the Swedes. We admit ignorance as to that, but we believe that Sweden also is democratic. It had an elective monarchy early in the fourteenth century, and although that arrangement was upset two centuries later, the legacy of democracy has been working ever since. The mountains that divide the two countries are not so high that the national characteristics are entirely dissimilar. Norwegians may be "too proud to become Swedes." So far as we know, they have received no such invitation. No Scotsman wants to be an Englishman, or vice versa, but they do not fight about it. They are not ashamed of the name Britons; and a man may be a good Norwegian without objecting to be classed with the Swede as a Scandinavian. It is certainly Chauvinistic of GLOBETROTTER to boast that Norway once gave Sweden a decided beating; and we fancy the inaccuracy is on his side when he says that "no page in history can be brought up as evidence of a Norwegian defeat in battle at the hands of Sweden."

We read that the Kings of Denmark and Sweden, after defeating and slaying Olaf I. (the king who "established Christianity by force and cruelty"), divided Norway between them (A.D. 1000). On the 16th July, 1814, the Swedish troops entered Norway, and the same year Charles XIII. of Sweden was proclaimed king. There does not seem to have been a really decisive battle, but if the Norwegians defeated the Swedes, why did they accept a Swedish King? We will not, however, labour an unpleasant point unnecessarily. We cannot withdraw our remark about Norway being the weaker partner. In one way, recent history is sufficient to confirm it. Union is strength, and Norway is weak enough to wish to dissolve a union that has conserved Scandinavian strength in times of common peril. We hope they will never regret their separatist policy; and cordially echo our correspondent's wish that there may be no war. We do not think there will be war. GLOBETROTTER, in thinking that there is a strong strain of Norwegian and Danish blood in the veins of the English, thinks rightly. In the Hebrides, he will find unmistakable Norsemen, who still talk of "Viking" (Vikings); and in England proper, the rural dialects of the north-west contain to-day many purely Norwegian nouns that are in daily use. We are far from being ashamed of this fine strain; and trust that our Norwegian correspondent will accept these comments as well-meant and friendly, however erroneous, inaccurate, or ignorant they may in his eyes appear.

During 1904 forty-four ships were registered at Hongkong under the provisions of the Imperial Act, and four certificates were cancelled.

During 1904 fifty-six cases were heard in the Marine Magistrate's Court. Refusal of duty on board ship and breach of Harbour Regulations were the principal offences. In connection with the above, the Assistant Harbour Master has been placed in charge of the Water Police as a tentative measure.

Ng Tsai Hau was charged before Mr. F. A. Haveland at the Police Court on Saturday with the larceny of a quantity of clothing from No. 157 Moske Reclamation Street, Yau-mai. The defendant, it appears, was the tenant of one of the houses, and sub-let part of it to three other Chinese. While they were at work on Thursday last, Ng collected their wearing apparel and did the disappearing trick. When his fellow boarders returned, they found their wardrobes ransacked and the host missing. The police were informed, and a search was immediately instituted. Ng was found on a steamer which was about to leave for Macao, apprehended in some of the stolen articles. He was arrested, and appearing before His Worship on Saturday was sentenced to four weeks' imprisonment with hard labour and six hours' stoppage, and he is further to be recommended for banishment on the completion of his sentence.

HONGKONG STEAM LAUNCHES.

On the 31st December, says the Harbour Master in his report for 1904, there were 282 steam launches employed in the harbour. Of these, 106 were licensed for the conveyance of passengers, 134 were privately owned, 16 were the property of the Colonial Government, and 6 belonged to the Imperial Government in charge of Military Authorities.

Seventeen master's certificates were suspended, 7 for one month, 3 for six weeks, 3 for two months, 3 for three months, and 1 for six months; 2 engineer's certificates were suspended for 1 and 6 months respectively. Three masters were cautioned.

Four hundred and forty-three (443) engagements, and four hundred and fifty-six (456) discharges of masters and engineers were made from 1st January to 31st December.

Fourteen (14) steam launches were permitted to carry arms, &c., for their protection against pirates; of these, twelve were previously permitted, and two during this year.

AACHEN AND MUNICH FIRE INSURANCE CO.

We have received the revenue account of this Company for the year 1904, with the balance sheet, both in sterling, the conversion from marks being at the rate of 20=£.

The net premiums were £45,614 showing an increase of £45,614 upon the previous year.

The net losses amounted to £360,009 being 55.9 per cent. of the premium income, and the expenses, inclusive of commission and other outgo, amounted to £185,697 or 28.8 per cent. thus leaving a surplus of £98,774 or 15.3 per cent.

Interest receipts, inclusive of profit on investments realised etc., amounted to £45,924.

After carrying £22,908 to premium reserve in order to provide for increased liabilities on policies not run off, the net profit arising from the years operations amounted to £121,789.

Inclusive of £19,886 brought forward from 1903, the divisible surplus amounts to £141,675 and has been appropriated as follows:

THE WAR.

["DAILY PRESS" SERVICE.]

LINIEVITCH SURROUNDED.

LONDON, 17th June.

The Japanese have succeeded in completely enveloping General Linievitch and the Russian Army.

The greatest battle of the whole campaign is believed to be imminent.

PEACE REPRESENTATIVES.

LONDON, 17th June.

It is reported that M. Neidoff will represent Russia, and the Marquis Ito, Japan, at the peace conference at Washington.

RUSSIAN NAVAL CHIEFS

RESIGN.

LONDON, 17th June.

The Tushima fiasco has caused the Grand Duke Alexis (First Navy Lord) and Vice-Admiral Avelan (Minister of Marine) to resign.

[REUTERS' SERVICE.]

"NONE SO BLIND AS THEM THAT WILL NOT SEE."

LONDON, 16th June.

The St. Petersburg press continues to comment in an arrogant manner on the suggestions of peace, declaring that Japan is more in need of peace than Russia.

A GRAND DUKE'S "DIGNITIES."

LONDON, 16th June.

The Tsar has accepted the resignation of the Grand Duke Alexis from Supreme Chief of the fleet and the Navy Department, but the Grand Duke retains the dignities of Grand Admiral, and aide-de-camp to the Tsar.

POURPARLERS' SEULEMENT.

LONDON, 17th June.

The announcement of the selection of Washington as a meeting place appears to imply that progress is being made towards making peace, otherwise nothing whatever is known of the "pourparleying."

A HONGKONG STREET PERIL.

The Chinese, whose front stoops overhang the public ways at varying heights, have a careless and very dangerous habit of dropping things. Sometimes accident is responsible; sometimes in mischief some light article, or a cup of tea, will be aimed at a foreign devil passing beneath; and sometimes, no doubt, reckless malice puts the pedestrian's life in peril. A Daily Press representative was within three yards of the spot when an earthenware crock struck the ground on the hill leading up past the jail some weeks ago. This sort of thing ought to be rigorously suppressed; and it seems a pity that a prosecution should fail for want of evidence. However, in the case that follows, the magistrate had not enough to justify conviction. Luk Tong, the foki who was charged with hurling the water jar from the third floor of a house in Third Street on to the head of Tai Choog and causing grievous bodily harm, again appeared before Mr. G. N. Orme at the Police Court on Saturday.

Mr. O. D. Thomson prosecuted, and Mr. A. Holbarow (of Messrs. Deacon, Looker and Deacon) appeared for the defendant.

Tai Kit, complainant's foki, was the only witness to the deed. He stated that he saw the defendant throw the jar, which struck complainant on the head and felled him. Immediately a crowd gathered and an uproar ensued.

Mr. Holbarow—If you saw all this, why did you not come forward before and give evidence? Witness—I was afraid of the haifong (people in the neighbourhood), and I only came forward now on the solicitation of complainant's brother.

His Worship, after hearing the evidence for the defence, stated that it was incumbent on the prosecution to prove clearly that the defendant threw the jar. Tai Kit did not recognise his master who was close to him when he fell, and yet he recognised the defendant some distance away.

Under the circumstances His Worship was of opinion that the evidence was not sufficient to convict and, therefore, discharged the defendant.

A CANTONESE BEB-BERI CASE.

The Cabineuse of the 13th inst., contains the following picturesque report:—

Go Tan Ko has gone to join Confucius and all the dead Chinese. He intended to go to Canton, but as he crossed the gulf of the Dubi's starboard quarter, Death met him and took him across the Styx.

He had been in Manila since the last days of the dons, and had made much money, for a coolie. He was going home to buy a wife in the city of the flower pagoda. As he left the house for the steamer he rebelled and fell on the deck. At first it was thought he was sea-sick, but soon it was seen that the trouble was more serious. He was removed ashore and died as his feet again rested on Philippine terra firma.

The quarantine medical officer reported the cause of death as beri-beri.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIR,—In your leader of June 12th concerning the political situation in Scandinavia there are some inaccuracies which I beg leave to point out in your esteemed paper.

It is a deplorable fact that the political position of Norway has been less known to even the well informed public outside of Scandinavia than almost that of any other country.

That this is the case seems the more remarkable, when it is remembered that thousands of tourists every year visit the "Land of the Midnight Sun," and that Norway by ties of origin, race, religion, interests and friendship is more closely connected with Great Britain than any other state in Europe. We Norwegians have a distinct and just claim to be more recognised than we are.

In every branch of the peaceful arts we have fostered some of the greatest personalities of the last century, to mention prominently: Ibsen, Bjornson, Abel, Grieg, Hansteen, Dahl, Thaulow and Nansen.

We are a proud and free born people and one of the oldest states of Europe. Our national sentiments and patriotism are well characterized. From time immemorial there have been feuds between Norwegians and Swedes, and these two countries are as different as neighbours possibly can be. While Norway is a democratic and free trading state, Sweden is aristocratic and strongly adhering to the protective system. In Sweden the land is in the hands of the few, in Norway of the many.

Besides Norway is mainly an industrial and shipping country having the fourth tonnage of the world, while Sweden, although possessing great industries, is chiefly agricultural.

The male line of the Norwegian Royal House became extinct in the 14th century, so for some time we were united with Sweden under King Magnus, who was married to a Norwegian princess. A younger son Haakon took up the reins of a separate Norway. He was married to the famous Queen Margrete who, on his death, united Norway, Sweden and Denmark under her iron sceptre. Sweden soon left the Union, but Norway and Denmark remained united till 1814.

By the treaty of Kiel, the Powers decided to punish Denmark-Norway for their devotion to France, and reward Carl Johan Bernadotte Crown Prince of Sweden, formerly Marshal of France, for his valuable services against his old enemy Napoleon, by presenting Norway to Sweden. The Powers and Sweden had, however, entirely forgotten to take into calculation, that there was a Norwegian nation, which had always been too proud to become Danes, and which was at that moment both too proud and too powerful to be willing to become Swedes.

"The Norwegians would not acknowledge 'and never have acknowledged' the Peace of 'Kiel' as binding for them."

We commenced war, and in the only important battle taking place the Swedes were repulsed and thrown back over the frontier. In the meanwhile the Norwegian Government opened negotiations about a Union based on absolute equality and separation in all matters except the personal and defensive union represented by the Royal House of Bernadotte. Thus was the Union of 1814 founded, and "Norway" retained her full internal freedom, her own "army, her own navy, her own bank and monetary system, her own customs duty, her own university, her own flag, in short, everything "needful to secure her independent existence."

When dealing with Norwegians affairs the king was to be considered King of Norway only. For economical reasons the Norwegians at the outset placed the management of foreign affairs in the hands of the king.

When Norwegian shipping and commerce later on began to flourish, we realized that it was absurd policy to continue the company of foreign representation, as the interests of Sweden in many cases were diametrically opposed to those of Norway. Then we began the agitation of reform, which has led to the dissolution.

But the underlying cause is as much the constant endeavours on the part of Sweden to put Norway in a secondary position in the Union, which we, as a proud and independent people, highly resent. I will not mention the many breaches of faith committed by Sweden in dealing with Norway, for they are legion.

When the Daily Press writes that Norway in 1898 was "refused a purely Norwegian flag," this statement is erroneous, in so far as we always had a purely Norwegian flag. We were refused sanction by the King—it is true—to remove the union consisting of Norwegian and Swedish colours from the corner of our flag, but as this Bill in 1898 was passed for the third time, it became an Act in accordance with a provision of our constitution without receiving Royal sanction. Since then we have been flying no union-marked flag except in the navy and army.

The Daily Press is incorrect in stating that Norway and Sweden "united in the most amicable manner to raid England." In the Viking days, the Swedish sold of enterprises was always in the East, while Danes and Norwegians went towards the West, extending their expeditions even to Italy. William the Conqueror was a direct descendant in the seventh generation of the Norwegian Sea-King Rolf and I am strongly inclined to believe that there is a strong strain of Norwegian and Danish blood in the veins of the English.

It is delightful for us to think of all what our descendants, the English, have accomplished walking in the footsteps of the Vikings.

It is the hope of the writer that the present conflict will lead to no bloodshed, and may be that the three Scandinavian countries once more in future will unite, when the national character of the Swedish nation has changed into more
